Since 2010, the average for the 33 African countries has increased by 1.5 percentage points, from 14.1% in 2010 to 15.6% in 2021. Over the same period, the tax-to-GDP ratio in the Democratic Republic of the Congo has increased by 0.8 percentage points, from 8.3% to 9.1%. The highest tax-to-GDP ratio reported for the Democratic Republic of the Congo since 2000 was 10.5% in 2012, with the lowest being 0.6% in 2000.

* The Africa (33) average is not available before 2009 due to missing data in some countries. In 2009, it is calculated based on estimated tax-to-GDP ratios for Chad, Gabon and Nigeria in that year, as data were not available prior to 2010 in these countries. Annual changes are rounded to one decimal place. Due to rounding, sums and differences of reported figures might differ from the actual values.

Tax-to-GDP ratio, 2021

The Democratic Republic of the Congo's¹ tax-to-GDP ratio in 2021 (9.1%) was lower than the average of the 33 African countries in 2023 (15.6%) by 6.5 percentage points.

¹ The tax-to-GDP ratio of the Democratic Republic of Congo excludes social security contributions prior 2012 as the data are not available

* The Latin America and the Caribbean (LAC) and the Asia-Pacific (29) averages refer to the respective 2023 regional publications. For more information see <https://oe.cd/revstatslac> and <https://oe.cd/revstatsap>.

In the OECD classification the term "taxes" is defined as compulsory unrequited payments to general government. Taxes are unrequited in the sense that benefits provided by government to taxpayers are not normally in proportion to their payments. Non-tax revenues are all other government revenues that are not classified as taxes.
